GUBERNATORIAL COMPETITORS -- Voters of the midwestern state of Nebraska created an unusual situation recently when they chose Democratic Party candidate Helen Boosalis (right) to run against Republican Party candidate Kay Orr (left) for office as Governor. It is the first time in United States history that two women have had to campaign against each other for such a high office. Candidate Orr, 47, is currently the State Treasurer. Her opponent, Boosalis, 66, is the former mayor of the state's capital, Lincoln. (86-1730-C)
