The Springfield, Illinois, house where Lincoln lived from 1844 to 1861. It is the only house he ever owned. In the foreground is an artist's conception of Lincoln returning to Springfield after the Lincoln-Douglas debates. This period of his life is covered in the Robert E. Sherwood play, ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS. The radio version of the play is a production of the Voice of America in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy (ANTA).
