

REPUBLICAN HOPEFULS -- Six potential Republican Party candidates for U.S. president in the 1988 election pose together during a republican leadership conference in Nashua, New Hampshire. From left are: former Secretary of State Alexander Haig; Congressman Jack Kemp of New York; television evangelist Pat Robertson; former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld; Kansas Senator Robert Dole, and former Delaware Governor Pete du Pont. New Hampshire, a small New England state, holds the first presidential primary election in the nation in February 1988.
