President Harry S. Truman of the United States has not changed his daily routine despite the recent attempt on his life by two members of a small anti-U.S., Puerto-Rican group. The U.S. Chief Executive still takes his early-morning stroll, and receives as many callers as usual at his office in the White House.
