

C5819F3

News reporters representing United States press associations and independent newspapers, and correspondents for many overseas publications ask questions freely of U.S. President Harry S. Truman at weekly press conferences. More than 500 reporters are accredited and may attend. There are no restrictions as to questions asked the President, and they are not required to be submitted in advance.

The photograph shows journalists interviewing President Truman in the new press conference room at an executive office building in Washington, D.C. Until recently such conferences were held at the White House. (SD-67323)

(Note: Plastic plates on this picture are being processed and should reach your mission shortly.)

1.- He aquí al Presidente Truman en el curso de una de las conferencias de prensa que se celebran en Washington.

C5819F3