

PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S FIRST PRESS CONFERENCE BROADCAST 'LIVE' BY TV & RADIO

TELEVISION CAMERA -- A television camera (center) is focused on a newsman as he rises to ask a question during President John F. Kennedy's first press conference in Washington January 23. This was the first time a regular White House news meeting was broadcast "live" by television and radio. The conference was held in the auditorium of the new State Department building. (61-37)
