

The free nations will never give up the fight for world peace. President Harry S. Truman of the United States of America declared recently.

The U.S. Chief Executive stated that "the free world must have armed strength... ready for any emergency," although he expressed the hope that this armed strength would not have to be used. "But," he added, "we know that unless we have armed strength we cannot put out the fires of aggression that threaten the peace of the world."

President Truman spoke in Detroit, Michigan, during the 250th anniversary celebration of the founding of the city. Detroit is the largest automobile manufacturing center in the world. [51-11602P]
