

NEW HOME FOR AN OLD U.S. UNIVERSITY

NEW YORK -- An additional campus for Fordham University begins to take shape as the cornerstone of a new School of Law is unveiled by dignitaries of church and state. Participants in this ceremony are (left to right): the Archbishop of New York, Francis Cardinal Spellman; the Governor of the State, Nelson A. Rockefeller; the Very Reverend Laurence J. McGinley, S.J., president and rector of the university; and the Honorable Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, who gave the dedicatory address. Fordham University, a 119-year-old Roman Catholic institution, is conducted by members of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits).
