GIBBS AND WESTINGHOUSE HONORED IN HALL OF FAME

The long, curving colonnade of New York University's Hall of Fame was dedicated in 1901 and since then the bronze busts of 85 Americans have been placed there. Every five years, people of all ages nominate those who they think have made the most outstanding contributions to the United States and the world. A group of electors then make the ultimate choice from these nominations. The busts of Josiah Willard Gibbs and George Westinghouse are the most recent to be installed among the Hall's sculptures.

Silhouetted against the sky, the busts of the men and women included in the Hall of Fame are thrown into dramatic relief. (Photo No. 52-4338. Accompanies Feature F-58-25.)
