

C13S64 F4

AMERICA LIVES IN THE LINCOLN TRADITION

Picture Story No. 335

C13S64 F4

MASTER CAPTION

If Abraham Lincoln, 16th President of the United States (1861-1865) could return to the country today, he might marvel at the vast changes during the past century but would find unchanged the principles of freedom and equality which he championed. The daily activities around the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C., a shrine erected by a grateful Nation, are typical of those he would see in America today.

3-11. The satisfaction derived from hard work was something Lincoln could share with his fellow Americans. Before he became a lawyer, Congressman and President he had worked as a store clerk, postmaster and a laborer, splitting rails with an axe to earn his living. (56-25838)

Albo
S. J.

56-25838

Presidents: Abraham Lincoln

C13S64 F4

La satisfacción derivada de un trabajo fuerte fue algo que Lincoln pudo compartir con sus compatriotas. Antes de ser abogado, diputado y presidente, había trabajado como dependiente de comercio, administrador de correos y jornalero partiendo raíles con un hacha para ganarse la vida.

MONUMENTS - LINCOLN MEMORIAL