YOSEMITE BEAUTY -- "As you watch it, you can see the clouds move." That is how Mrs. Gerald Ford described this photograph of a clearing winter storm over Yosemite National Park in California. The picture was taken by Ansel Adams, one of the world's most noted scenic photographers. He presented a print to President and Mrs. Ford at the White House while in Washington to promote conservation and national parks. It now hangs in place of a traditional painting in Mr. Ford's private work area next to the Oval Office. (75-36)
