

C21526F4

COLECCIÓN FOTOS EMBAJADA EE.UU.

LUNAR BOULDER -- A boulder "as big as a house" is investigated by Apollo-16 astronauts John Young and Charles Duke during their third and final traverse in the Descartes highlands of the Moon. The spacemen discovered the huge formation when they drove their battery-powered rover up to the rim of a broad crater known as North Bay, some three kilometers from their landing vehicle. This view was taken from a television screen.

(72-1092)

C21526F4

