

FLYING SALUTE -- Leaping up from the lunar surface, Apollo-16 commander John Young salutes beside the United States Flag. At left background are the lunar lander "Orion" and the battery-powered rover vehicle. In the shadow of the lander, behind Young, is the ultra-violet camera/spectrograph used to made the first astronomical observations from the Moon. In the background is Stone Mountain, one of the prominent features near the landing site in the Descartes highlands of the Moon. This picture was taken by Charles Duke. (72-1603-C)
