

OVER THE TOP -- Dwight Stones of Long Beach (California) State University clears the bar on his way to a new world indoor high jump record of 2.150 meters (7 feet $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches) in San Diego, California. The 22-year-old athlete topped his own mark of 2.140 (7 - $6\frac{1}{4}$) set two days earlier in New York City. Both leaps bettered the old world record of 2.148 (7 - $5\frac{3}{4}$) which he had established at the same New York meet in 1975.
