FAREWELL SESSION -- President Ronald Reagan (left) gestures while talking with departing Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin in the Oval Office of the White House in Washington. The planned 15-minute session stretched into a 75-minute discussion of issues concerning U.S.-Soviet relations. Dobrynin was the dean of the Washington Diplomatic Corps when he left to become chief of the international department of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee. He has been the Soviet Ambassador in Washington since 1962. (86-236-C)
