

Harry S. Truman, President of the United States (center), leads the parade down the main street of Springfield, Missouri, as he marches with his comrades of World War I. The occasion was the reunion of the U. S. Army's 35th Division.

The reunion provided an opportunity for the President to mingle with the local townspeople and with fellow veterans. Flanking him are Warren Osgood (left of the President) and Major General Robert Landry (right of the President). Behind them paraded 37 members of Battery D, 129th Field Artillery, 35th Division.

President Truman, then a captain, commanded that unit in some of the major engagements of World War I. (52-7069P)
