VACATION STUDIES -- President Gerald Ford's two younger children combine study and pleasure in the great American west during vacation between school terms. Seventeen-year-old Susan (top) joins distinguished nature photographer Ansel Adams and other students for a photographic workshop in Yosemite National Park in California. Steven, 19, is catapulted from a bucking bronco at a rodeo school near San Diego, California. He was unhurt. Oldest son Michael, 25, is continuing his studies at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in Massachusetts, and Jack, 23, who graduated from Utah State University, is spending part of the summer in the White House.
