ECONOMIC TALK -- President Gerald Ford emphasizes a point as he meets with his economic advisers at the White House in Washington. He called inflation the "number one enemy" and discussed plans for a domestic "summit conference" to bring it under control. From left are: L. William Seidman and William Scranton, aides; Roy Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget; Kenneth Rush, economic counselor; Mr. Ford; Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and William Simon, Secretary of the Treasury.
