

AMERICANS FOCUS ON PRESIDENTIAL CONVENTIONS

In July 1960, the two major political parties hold national conventions to nominate candidates for President and Vice President of the United States in the national elections, November 3. The Democratic Party's convention will be held in Los Angeles, California, starting July 11. Two weeks later, on July 25, the Republican Party's convention opens in Chicago, Illinois. This series of photographs illustrates highlights of these quadrennial Presidential nominating conventions in the United States.

14-14 The successful candidate--now the leader of his Party and the Party's nominee for President of the United States--is surrounded by press photographers as he appears in person on the podium to thank the convention for his nomination.
(60-7174)