

U. S. GOVERNMENT RECOGNIZES IMPORTANCE OF FULLY INFORMED PRESS

Presidential press conferences are at the pinnacle of an elaborate apparatus by which all branches of the United States Government keep the American people fully informed of what their government is doing.

Hundreds of reporters from the United States and many other countries attend frequent press conferences held by President Kennedy. Here a reporter stands (center) to ask the President a question.

(Photo No. 62-5659. Accompanies Feature F-62-369.)

JOHN F. KENNEDY - PRESS