

TELEPHONE VIA SATELLITE -- Vice President Lyndon Johnson participated in the first telephone conversation relayed by the Telstar communication satellite during its first day in orbit. The call originated at Andover, Maine; was received via the satellite at Holmdel, New Jersey and was sent on to the Vice President in Washington. Here, Mr. Johnson examines a model of Telstar after the transmission. At right is E.J. McNeely, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company. The company developed the satellite and sponsored the launching. (62-3787)
