CONSTITUTIONAL CELEBRATION -- Former Chief Justice Warren Burger sits at the desk of James Madison, on display at Disney World's Epcot Center in Orlando, Florida. This exhibit is one of several nationwide celebrating the bicentennial of the Constitution of the United States. Mr. Burger, who recently retired from the U.S. Supreme Court, is chairman of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the Constitution. James Madison (1751 - 1836) is called "the Father of the Constitution" because he helped plan the system of checks and balances that regulate the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of the United States government. He also served as fourth President of the United States from 1809 to 1817.
