Abstract

This final degree project will present the development of a waveguide calculation module that will be added to the EM simulation software newFASANT. A design of the components that will be added will be presented, and a final implementation will be developed applying theorical concepts about waveguides in order to create a tool that allows to analyze waveguide parameters.