

STUDENT DESIGN WINNER -- Peter Purol, 17, of Baltimore (Maryland) holds his winning entry in a nationwide design contest among high school students for the emblem of the Viking Mars mission. The competition was sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the National Science Teachers Association. NASA administrator James Fletcher is at right, and in center background is a model of the spacecraft due to land on the Martian surface on July 4, 1976, the nation's 200th birthday. (75-990)

