AWAITING PICK-UP -- Astronauts Charles Duke (left) and John Young relax in a life raft as Thomas Mattingly appears to be checking their Apollo-16 spacecraft for the last time as they await pick-up by recovery helicopter. They splashed down on target just south of the Equator 2,780 kilometers south of Hawaii to end their 11-day lunar voyage. They brought back hundreds of photographs and more than 91 kilograms of lunar rock samples from the Moon's Descartes area.
