

NOTAS BIOGRAFICAS DE LOS AUTORES

BENJAMIN J. COHEN William L. Clayton Professor of International Economic Affairs at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. Professor Cohen received B.A. and Ph.D. degrees, both in economics, from Columbia University in 1959 and 1963, respectively. After working for two years at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, Professor Cohen taught at Princeton University for seven years. He has been a Ford Foundation, Rockefeller Foundation, and Council on Foreign Relations Fellow, and has lectured widely both in the United States and abroad. His research interests include international monetary relations and political economy. His most recent books are Banks and the Balance of Payments (1981) and In Whose Interest?: International Banking and American Foreign Policy (1986).

ALAN K. HENRIKSON Associate Professor of Diplomatic History at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. Professor Henrikson received an A.B. in history from Harvard College in 1962; a B.A. and M.A. in philosophy, politics, and economics in 1964 and 1968, respectively, at Balliol College, Oxford, where he studied as a Rhodes Scholar; and an A.M. and Ph.D. in history in 1966 and 1970, respectively, from Harvard University where he was a Danforth Fellow. In 1986-1987 he was the first Lloyd I. Miller Visiting Professor of Diplomatic History and Scholar-in-Residence at the Center for the Study of Foreign Affairs in the Foreign Service Institute of the U.S. State Department. He was then also a Visiting Scholar at the Center of International Affairs of Harvard University. In December 1986 he served as Visiting Professor at the National Institute for Defense Studies in Tokyo. During 1983-1984 he directed the 50th Anniversary Negotiating World Order Project at The Fletcher School. He has taught at Wellesley College and spent a year as a fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington. He has written extensively on American foreign policy, the North Atlantic Alliance, political geography, and diplomacy. He recently published "East-West Rivalry in Latin-America--Between the Eagle and the Bear" in Robert W. Clawson, ed., East-West Rivalry in the Third World: Security Issues and Regional Perspectives (1986), and edited Negotiating World Order:

The Artisanship and Architecture of Global Diplomacy (1986).

HEWSON A. RYAN Edward R. Murrow Professor of Public Diplomacy, Emeritus, and Director of the Murrow Center at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. Professor Ryan received B.A. and M.A. degrees from Yale University and a Ph.D. from the University of Madrid. He has taught Spanish and Latin American literature at Yale, and conducted seminars on diplomacy at Harvard's Institute of Politics. Entering the United States Foreign Service in 1951, he served overseas in Columbia, Bolivia, Chile, and Honduras, in the latter post as ambassador from 1969-1973. His Washington assignments included stints as assistant, associate, and deputy director of the United States Information Agency, and senior deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs. He joined the Fletcher faculty upon his retirement from the Foreign Service in 1977. His current research interests focus on Ibero-American affairs and international communication.

EDWARD SCHUMACHER es graduado de la Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. Ha sido corresponsal del New York Times en varios países antes de serlo en España. Actualmente reside en Madrid y redacta un libro sobre España, que debe aparecer en los Estados Unidos. Es experto en cuestiones de Política Internacional.

ANGEL VIÑAS es Catedrático de la Universidad Complutense de Madrid, Director de Relaciones Exteriores en la Comisión Europea, y Asesor del Ministro de Asuntos Exteriores del Gobierno Español.