ADDRESS TO SOVIET PEOPLE -- President Ronald Reagan tells the people of the Soviet Union that they and the American people must live together in peace, face the challenge of eliminating nuclear weapons and join forces against terrorism. He made the remarks over the Voice of America from their studio in Washington. He added: "As the world's two strongest nations, we owe it to the rest of humanity not only to keep our word, but to help find peaceful settlements to local and regional conflicts." (85-3576-C)
