

Personal

C1055FZ
COLECCIÓN FOTOS EMBAJADA EE.UU.

U. S. Information Agency
Magazine Reprints, IFS

WP-336
MR-55-S-130

The Touch of a Hand

Helen Keller (left) and Anne Sullivan Macy. Left blind and deaf by illness when she was 19 months old, Helen Keller was like a little wild animal unable to communicate with those around her until she was six years old. Then her father brought Anne Sullivan to the Keller home as a teacher for his daughter. The association of teacher and pupil has created a sort of world legend which has been an inspiration to the handicapped everywhere. Helen's communication with Teacher, the name she still uses to refer to Anne Sullivan Macy, was through the touch of their hands. (55-17381)

Jacket photograph from "Teacher," Doubleday & Company

